

Model Commitments for Advancing Genuine and Credible Elections

THE
CARTER CENTER

International Foundation
for Electoral Systems

Version: March 12nd

This Model Commitments document is a joint norms-building initiative by International IDEA, The Carter Center, NDI, and IFES. It has been developed to provide a set of commitments that can assist individual countries and electoral integrity advocates in their efforts to strengthen genuine and credible elections. It also aims to engage countries, agencies, election management bodies, and both international and national actors, in work to promote electoral integrity. The model commitments are sourced from existing international norms, standards, and best practices for democratic elections. Importantly, the model commitments also seek to expand upon them, and the document includes aspirational language to serve as a high-level benchmark for key actors interested in these issues.

International IDEA, The Carter Center, NDI, and IFES are pleased to be able to circulate this document for socialization and discussion. Interested organizations are welcome to be listed as supporting the initiative. Please relay any requests to support the document as well as any other comments on the contents to David Carroll (Carter Center), Pat Merloe (independent expert), or Ian Batista (Carter Center; ian.batista@cartercenter.org).

Model Commitments for Advancing Genuine and Credible Elections

March 12nd, 2024

INTRODUCTION

Genuine elections are the keystone in any democratic arch. They are related to other essential building blocks, while democracy cannot be realized and maintained without them. They are an expression of democratic tenets that sovereignty resides in the people, and the authority of government is derived from the free exercise of their will through universal and equal suffrage free of unreasonable restrictions.

Those precepts are embedded in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, regional treaties, and national constitutions the world over. By their very nature, genuine elections are interlaced with a variety of processes and institutions as well as the exercise of a range of rights and civic responsibilities. Genuine elections are also the means to resolve peacefully the competition for political office and transition of power as well as a vehicle for candidate and government accountability, and the selection of policy choices aimed at improving people's lives.

While genuine elections are an ultimate expression of national sovereignty, they also are affected by both transnational actors and global developments, which gives them an international dimension. As a means for pursuing peace, stability, and prosperity, genuine elections also become an important subject of international cooperation. United Nations and regional intergovernmental bodies, and UN and regional treaty body mechanisms and informal governmental associations like the Summit for Democracy and the Open Government Partnership also address critical issues related to the integrity of elections. In addition, genuine elections are the subject of associations of election management bodies (EMBs) and networks of international and citizen election observers as well as others. International interest and the need for international cooperation have intensified as technologies, information environments, actions by transnational anti-democratic actors, and other key factors present heightened challenges to conducting genuine and credible elections.

Elections present challenges to any country holding them. With the constantly changing landscape of political competition, conditions, and technologies across countries, constant attention to election quality is required. Adopting and maintaining robust, grounded commitments to core, internationally accepted election standards, obligations and best practices – such as the model commitments presented here – provides a strong foundation for any country building, revising, or conducting genuine elections that reflect the will of the people. Thus, electoral reform and improvements in electoral processes are ongoing endeavors in every country.

With these matters in mind, several international organizations cooperated to develop this set of model commitments to assist the efforts of individual countries and electoral integrity advocates to strengthen electoral integrity, and to engage other countries, agencies, and international and national actors to promote electoral integrity. The commitments assume that any country, whether acting through a ministry, parliament, EMB, or other agency, by adopting commitments either attests that it already is meeting the commitments or commits to effectively implement them in a timely manner through various electoral reform measures.

The model commitments include one high level, general commitment focused on the core of electoral integrity, while others are grouped into five thematic areas: the legal framework; election administration; electoral accountability; information integrity; and international support for norms and defense of electoral integrity. The five thematic areas include one overarching model commitment that is presented first, followed by more specific or ‘detailed’ commitments. Each model commitment—overarching or detailed—is supported by references to multiple international normative sources, including international and regional treaties, political commitments, state practices, and interpretive sources as presented in the Election Obligations and Standards Handbook¹.

While the model commitments cover many of the principal areas of electoral integrity, given the rapidly evolving electoral universe, they are suggested as starting points, and are not meant to be a comprehensive list or definitive statements. To help ensure public confidence in the integrity of elections and democratic governance, commitments to strengthen electoral integrity should be regularly reviewed, refined, and adapted to local contexts while maintaining the expected rigor and conditions, as electoral practices evolve.

By linking the model commitments to international norms, standards, and best practices, we can identify areas where the existing international normative framework for democratic elections is well developed, and conversely, where there are limitations or gaps. For example, the model commitments on election-related rights concerning universal and equal suffrage, and election administration that is independent, politically neutral, adequately resourced, and transparent are in areas where normative development and practice are strong and well recognized.

However, some of the model commitments are in areas that are insufficiently addressed by international and regional treaties and recognized best practices, e.g., issues related to political finance, electoral technologies, procurement, information integrity and the internet, data privacy, the role of the digital media, and cybersecurity. This is of particular importance with the increased ubiquity of Artificial Intelligence (AI) systems, including generative AI, and challenges surrounding the use, consumption and impact of AI on information integrity. While relatively new and/or less thoroughly covered in the existing normative framework, these are topic areas that hold great importance in the current global context, and hence underscore where additional normative development is needed.

No country fully meets the democratic ideals it embraces. Democratic development, including ensuring genuine elections, requires constant, concerted efforts. While making commitments is important, implementing them is crucial. The model commitments below are intended to serve as high-level benchmarks. Each country should be encouraged to identify the specific obstacles keeping it from fully fulfilling its goal of holding fully democratic elections and to develop more specific commitments and effective actions and reforms to surmount those obstacles. Specific commitments should be measurable and monitorable, enabling stakeholders to hold their governments accountable and allowing governments to show objective democratic progress.

Two general notes on formatting: The text in each box on key model commitments is presented in the future tense, to convey forward-looking commitments, and is followed by a bulleted list of statements (stated in the past tense) that reflect election standards and obligations. The latter are sourced from international and regional treaties, political commitments, human rights treaty body mechanisms and interpretive sources, and best practices, as presented in the Election Obligations and Standards Handbook. Each bullet includes footnotes with the original sources.

The color coding of the references categorizes the origin of each normative standard based on source material. Green indicates the most deeply rooted standards in the international system through international or regional treaty or international law in some way. Blue indicates that the normative standard stems from interpretative sources or political commitments. Orange indicates that the standard is rooted in state practices that should be emulated as good practice. This color-coded presentation represents the current status of obligations, standards, and best practices related to critical features of elections and representative governance, as rooted in key guiding normative documents. At the same time, it also shows where such normative foundations are weaker or less well established. It is hoped that the model commitments presented here can serve to facilitate actions to enshrine equality, access, and transparency more fully in election practices globally.

Overarching Electoral Integrity Commitments

The six overarching model commitments are presented below and are found in their respective sections along with detailed commitments.

- 1. Genuine Elections: The legal framework, institutions, and processes for elections guarantee that there shall be periodic elections that genuinely reflect the will of the people, realized through universal and equal suffrage, which is freely expressed without unreasonable restrictions, and which is accurately tabulated and honored through peaceful transfers of offices and their related powers.
- 2. Legal Framework: The legal framework provides that every person's exercise of election-related rights and responsibilities will be free of discrimination proscribed by international human rights norms and protected by equality before and equal protection of the law. Plus, they will provide immediate, effective and enforced remedies for violations, whether related to prospective voters, electoral candidates, contesting political parties, election authorities, election campaigners, journalists covering election developments, and election observers.

- 3. Election Administration: EMBs at the national and subnational levels shall be constituted and resourced in a manner that ensures their political neutrality, administrative independence, and professional efficacy, and the mechanisms for their appointment or selection shall be transparent.
- 4. Electoral Accountability: Legal provisions shall be promulgated requiring that decisions made by EMBs, courts, prosecutors, law enforcement, and other government agencies are documented and made publicly available in a timely manner. Information concerning election-related administrative complaints or other such procedures concerning redress of abridgements of election-related rights and judicial processes shall be timely determined and made publicly available, including the reasoning for the decisions, disposition of administrative and criminal investigations and prosecutions. Complainants shall be able to appeal adverse rulings.
- 5. Information Integrity: Laws and regulations shall guarantee, without hindrance or unreasonable restrictions, including from disinformation, the freedom to seek, receive and impart credible information from any medium related to elections and forming of opinions about electoral or referenda choices, from the Internet and other digital communication means, including those generated by Artificial Intelligence (AI).
- 6. International Engagement: Relevant government agencies, including EMBs, should engage in international and regional efforts to defend and advance democratic norms and credible elections. Such efforts include, e.g., the Summit for Democracy, Open Government Partnership, Global Network for Securing Electoral Integrity, Asian Electoral Stakeholders Forum, international associations of EMBs, regional and global dialogues of EMBs, associations of civil society and international organizations concerned with election observation, electoral credibility and democratic norms. Such engagements should enable learning and sharing of experiences, including to address issues and challenges related to cybersecurity of election infrastructure, foreign-based threats to information integrity, illicit flows of money across borders (including digital currencies), and other threats that undermine the conduct of credible elections or subvert public confidence in democracy or electoral credibility.

MODEL COMMITMENTS FOR ELECTORAL INTEGRITY

Goal: To ensure that inclusive, transparent, and accountable elections are the basis for determining who governs on behalf of the people.

1: OVERARCHING COMMITMENT FOR ELECTORAL INTEGRITY: Genuine elections that reflect the will of the people

Legal Framework Commitments

Goal: To establish public confidence that the country's legal framework ensures credible elections by guaranteeing equal and universal suffrage rights; proper election administration; and the rights to participate in electoral affairs and to seek, receive and impart election related information.

2: OVERARCHING COMMITMENT: Election rights and responsibilities free from discrimination

Model Commitment: The legal framework provides that every person's exercise of election-related rights and responsibilities will be free of discrimination proscribed by international human rights norms and protected by equality before and equal protection of the law. Plus, it provides immediate, effective and enforced remedies for violations, whether related to prospective voters, electoral candidates, contesting political parties, election authorities, election campaigners, journalists covering election developments, and election observers.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- The legal framework for elections included guarantees of equality before the law.¹³
- The legal framework provided citizens with an effective (timely and enforceable) remedy throughout the electoral process.¹⁴
- The legal framework for elections was consistent with international human rights.¹⁵
- Genuine Elections that reflect the free expression of the will of the people.¹⁶
- Equal suffrage.¹⁷
- Right and opportunity to vote.¹⁸
- Every citizen had the right to be elected, subject only to reasonable restrictions.¹⁹
- The state took proactive measures to promote voting by the broadest pool of eligible voters and ensured votes cast were counted.²⁰

Detailed Commitments:

2.01: Equal suffrage

Model Commitment: The legal framework provides for equality of the vote (equal suffrage) relating to the proportion of voters to representatives and ensure against discrimination

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- Each vote was of equal weight.²¹
- Universal suffrage.²²
- Freedom from discrimination and equality before the law.²³
- The electoral system allowed multiparty participation and actual and equal representation.²⁴

2.02: Universal suffrage

Model Commitment: The legal framework provides that universal and equal suffrage rights (the right to vote and the right to seek to be elected) shall be guaranteed pertaining to voter registration and voting, legal recognition of political parties and candidates, and their qualification to be listed on the ballot.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- Voter registration promoted universal suffrage.²⁵
- Equal suffrage.²⁶
- Every citizen had the right to be elected, subject only to reasonable restrictions.²⁷

2.03: Independent election administration

Model Commitment: The legal framework provides that election administration will be independent, politically neutral, sufficiently and timely funded, and subject to transparency and accountability requirements that reinforce public confidence in its effectiveness and fairness.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- There was an independent and impartial electoral management body.²⁸
- The electoral management body had sufficient resources to implement all phases of the election process.²⁹
- The electoral management body ensured transparency in its decision making; for example, through open meetings and the use of public and competitive tenders.³⁰

2.04: Governmental neutrality

Model Commitment: The legal framework provides that all government/public resources, offices, and employees' efforts while performing governmental employment functions, must be politically neutral and not be engaged or used in activities to provide an advantage for those supporting or opposing referenda, specific electoral contestants or political parties over their competitors.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- There was an independent and impartial electoral management body.³²
- The EMB acted impartially in the administration of the election.³³
- The EMB, as an organ of the state, implemented effective policies to discourage acts of corruption.³⁴
- The EMB maintained and implemented policies to prevent, address, and penalize acts of corruption.³⁵
- Public resources were not abused in support of a particular party or candidate.³⁶
- The state acted to investigate and address violations of rights. It provided appropriate judicial and administrative means for addressing claims of rights violations, including allegations of electoral fraud.³⁷
- The law was clear regarding the extent to which public employees could be involved in a campaign. Public employees were not coerced into voting for a particular candidate or party.³⁸

2.05: Campaign finance transparency

Model Commitment: The legal framework provides for transparency in electoral campaign financing, including disclosure of funds raised and expenditures, including on political advertising of all types whether in broadcast, print, or social or other digital media.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- The funding received by a political party and/or candidate was disclosed in regular reports.³⁹
- There was a balanced and transparent system for political party financing.⁴⁰

- Disclosure provisions should clearly identify what counts as campaign expenditure.⁴¹
- Campaign finance regulation was consistent with the principles of the rule of law.⁴²

2.06: Equitable public resources

Model Commitment: Whenever available, public financial resources for campaigns shall be provided to those supporting or opposing referenda, parties and candidates according to an objective, fair, and reasonable equitable formula that may include targeted public funding to promote gender equity.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- Both the state and citizens were able to support candidates and parties, including financial support, and this support did not interfere with the independence of the party.⁴³
- State support of candidates was available on an equitable basis and was distributed according to an objective, fair and reasonable formula.⁴⁴
- All candidates were treated equitably with regard to campaign finance and expenditures.⁴⁵

2.07: Right to electoral information for all

Model Commitment: The legal framework recognizes and guarantees the right of citizens to seek, receive and communicate information related to elections (including the responsibilities to respect the rights of others and convey accurate information), whether exercised by prospective voters, electoral contestants, journalists, election observers, or other election related actors.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- Voter education efforts included information about all electoral rights including equal suffrage, the right to vote and be elected, the right to an effective remedy, and the secret ballot.⁴⁶
- The right of access to information was respected throughout the electoral process, including as it relates to the electoral contestants, media, and election observers.⁴⁷

2.08: Election-related information access and transparency

Model Commitment: The legal framework provides that all government held election-related information shall be made timely and publicly available, including via the internet and other digital communication means, without hindrance or unreasonable restrictions in accordance with open government and open electoral data principles so that citizens are able to freely seeking information and form opinions about electoral or referenda choices. This shall include information concerning census, demographic, administrative and electoral boundary, voter registration, party and candidate ballot qualification, political and election campaign finance, electoral materials procurement, polling station location, electoral procedures, voter turnout and election results from polling station through any intermediate stages to final tabulation,

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- Documents regarding the electoral process, including voting operations, were publicly accessible and accurate.⁴⁸
- The judgments, findings, and evidence of judicial proceedings, and legal reasoning for judgments, were made public.⁴⁹
- The right of access to information was respected throughout the electoral process, including as it relates to the media⁵⁰
- The electoral management body provided citizens with access to information throughout the electoral process.⁵¹
- The state proactively put in the public domain government information of public interest.⁵²
- A pluralistic media promoted citizen access to information, and the media was free to play an impartial and objective role in covering electoral issues.⁵³
- Voters were able to form opinions independently, on the basis of information from a plurality of sources and free from any manipulative interference.⁵⁴
- The right of access to information was protected for everyone.⁵⁵
- There were no restrictions on people who may practice journalism by the state, though journalists may have regulated themselves.⁵⁶
- Free communication of information and ideas about public and political issues took place between citizens, candidates, and elected representatives.⁵⁷
- All eligible voters were informed of their electoral rights before, during, and after election day.⁵⁸
- Editorial independence was protected, and the government did not abuse resources or influence to exert control over media content.⁵⁹
- News coverage of incumbents in the public media was not abused so that it constituted additional free airtime or print coverage.⁶⁰

Electoral Accountability Commitments

Goal: To establish confidence among prospective voters and electoral contestants that their election related rights will be protected by the rule of law and that effective administrative and legal redress of any infringements of those rights will be available should they seek it.

4: OVERARCHING COMMITMENT: Timely, transparent resolution of complaints and disputes

Model Commitment: Legal provisions shall be promulgated requiring that decisions made by EMBs, courts, prosecutors, law enforcement, and other government agencies are documented and made publicly available in a timely manner. Information concerning election related administrative complaints or other such procedures concerning redress of abridgements of election related rights and judicial processes shall be timely determined and made publicly available, including the reasoning for the decisions, disposition of administrative and criminal investigations and prosecutions. Complainants shall be able to appeal adverse rulings.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- The judgments, findings, and evidence of judicial proceedings, and legal reasoning for judgments, were made public.¹⁵¹
- An effective (timely and enforceable) remedy was available for all citizens for violations of their rights throughout the electoral process.¹⁵²
- The state proactively put in the public domain government information of public interest.¹⁵³
- Transparency and access to information were respected during the dispute resolution process.¹⁵⁴
- Parties to the complaints had access to factual information regarding the alleged violations.¹⁵⁵
- Potential complainants were informed of the means of filing a complaint and the time frame of its resolution.¹⁵⁶
- Complaints processes were transparent, and the opportunity to present evidence in support of a complaint existed.¹⁵⁷

Detailed Commitments:

4.01: Dispute resolution transparency

Model Commitment: Applicable laws and rules regarding administrative complaint mechanisms and judicial proceedings concerning electoral processes are widely publicized and available without overly burdensome fees, deposits, or requirements to prospective voters, electoral contestants and other interested.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- An effective (timely and enforceable) remedy was available for all citizens for violations of their rights throughout the electoral process.¹⁵⁸
- The ability to challenge the results of the election was provided by law and was available to complainants as appropriate.¹⁵⁹
- Voter education efforts included information about all electoral rights including equal suffrage, the right to vote and be elected, the right to an effective remedy, and the secret ballot.¹⁶⁰

4.02: Impartiality of EMB and government officials

Model Commitment: Laws, regulations and other official guidance, such as training materials, shall specify that any government or EMB employee who used resources of their offices, including work time, to pursue the advantage or disadvantage of any political party or candidate or referenda position shall be sanctioned based on due process of law.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- Steps were taken to prevent and punish fraud and electoral offenses.¹⁶¹
- There was an independent and impartial electoral management body.¹⁶²
- The EMB acted impartially in the administration of the election.¹⁶³
- The EMB, as an organ of the state, implemented effective policies to discourage acts of corruption.¹⁶⁴
- The electoral management body maintained and implemented policies to prevent, address, and penalize acts of corruption.¹⁶⁵
- The media was given access to information, particularly with regard to allegations of corruption and related offenses.¹⁶⁶
- The state acted to investigate and address violations of rights. It provided appropriate judicial and administrative means for addressing claims of rights violations, including allegations of electoral fraud.¹⁶⁷
- Public resources were not abused in support of a particular party or candidate.¹⁶⁸

- The law was clear regarding the extent to which public employees could be involved in a campaign. Public employees were not coerced into voting for a particular candidate or party.¹⁶⁹

4.03: Conflict of interest protections

Model Commitment: Legal requirements, including meaningful sanctions, shall be put in place concerning avoidance of conflicts of interest, whether economic, political or otherwise (including accepting gifts from those holding or seeking contracts), for all EMB and other government officials that conduct electoral support functions, and the requirements shall be circulated to such officials and widely publicized.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- The EMB maintained and implemented policies to prevent, address, and penalize acts of corruption, including during the voting process.¹⁷⁰
- The media was given access to information, particularly with regard to allegations of corruption and related offenses.¹⁷¹
- The EMB, as an organ of the state, implemented effective policies to discourage acts of corruption.¹⁷²
- The electoral management body ensured transparency in its decision making; for example, through open meetings and the use of public and competitive tenders.¹⁷³

4.04: Legal sanctions for election rights violations

Model Commitment: Laws and rules shall specify that anyone who violates the election related rights of voters, electoral candidates, campaigners, electoral workers, election observers or journalists covering elections shall be liable under specifically defined election related crimes and subject to specified penalties in accordance with due process of law protections.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- There was an independent and impartial electoral management body.¹⁷⁴
- Electoral stakeholders were free from arbitrary arrest and detention as well as intimidation and coercion.¹⁷⁵
- An effective and timely remedy was available for all citizens for violations of their rights throughout the electoral process.¹⁷⁶
- The EMB, as an organ of the state, implemented effective policies to discourage acts of corruption.¹⁷⁷

- The state acted to investigate and address violations of rights. It provided appropriate judicial and administrative means for addressing claims of rights violations, including allegations of electoral fraud.¹⁷⁸
- The state implemented sanctions against those who violated the electoral law.¹⁷⁹
- Sanctions for violations of the electoral law were proportionate, appropriate, and effectively enforced.¹⁸⁰

4.05: Whistleblower protection

Model Commitment: Protections shall be promulgated against firing or other retribution for persons who lodge election related complaints or otherwise in good faith make known information concerning wrongdoing by any EMB or government official for actions that violate election related rights or constitute election fraud.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- Electoral stakeholders were free from arbitrary arrest and detention as well as intimidation and coercion.¹⁸¹
- An effective (timely and enforceable) remedy was available for all violations of their fundamental rights.¹⁸²
- The legal framework provided the right for a fair and public hearing by a competent, impartial, and independent tribunal in the determination of rights.¹⁸³
- Everyone was treated equally before the law and courts.¹⁸⁴

4.06: Trained dispute resolution officials

Model Commitment: Judges, prosecutors and law enforcement officers shall be trained concerning: the legal framework for elections; the right to information concerning election related information; expedited processing of election related petitions, complaints and challenges; the active protection of election related rights of voters, electoral contestants, campaigners, election officials, election observers and journalists covering elections; and the timely prosecution of those who commit election related crimes.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- The legal framework provided the right for a fair and public hearing by a competent, impartial, and independent tribunal in the determination of rights.¹⁸⁵

Information Integrity Commitments

Goal: To ensure that the public is free to form and hold opinions relevant to elections without interference and prospective voters, electoral contestants and other concerned individuals may seek, receive and impart information and ideas promoting electoral integrity without being subjected to hate speech, intimidation, bad-faith manipulation or incitement to violence.

5: OVERARCHING COMMITMENT: Freedom of Information in elections

Model Commitment: Laws and regulations shall guarantee, without hindrance or unreasonable restrictions, including from disinformation, the freedom to seek, receive and impart credible information from any medium related to elections and forming of opinions about electoral or referenda choices, from the Internet and other digital communication means, including those generated by Artificial Intelligence (AI).

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- ☐ A pluralistic media promoted citizen access to information, and the media was free to play an impartial and objective role in covering electoral issues.¹⁸⁸
- ☐ Voters were able to form opinions independently, on the basis of information from a plurality of sources and free from any manipulative interference.¹⁸⁹
- ☐ The right of access to information was respected throughout the electoral process, including its relation to the media.¹⁹⁰
- ☐ There were no restrictions on people who may practice journalism by the state, though journalists may have regulated themselves.¹⁹¹
- ☐ Free communication of information and ideas about public and political issues took place between citizens, candidates, and elected representatives.¹⁹²
- ☐ Editorial independence was protected, and the government did not abuse resources or influence to exert control over media content.¹⁹³
- ☐ News coverage of incumbents in the public media was not abused so that it constituted additional free airtime or print coverage.¹⁹⁴

5.01: Nondiscriminatory access to media

Model Commitment: Laws and regulations provide that no legal or administrative obstacle stands in the way of unimpeded access to the media of all types on a non-discriminatory basis for all proponents and opponents of referendums, political parties and candidates wishing to participate in electoral and/or referendum processes.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- ❑ The appointment and functioning of regulatory authorities of the media were transparent, and they were independent and protected from political interference. The media regulatory body acted in a transparent and impartial manner.¹⁹⁵
- ❑ Private media, while not subject to the same regulation as public media, was generally fair and balanced in its coverage of the candidates and provided an equal opportunity for access to all candidates.¹⁹⁶
- ❑ Free airtime was distributed equally (both amount of space as well as the timing and location of the media space).¹⁹⁷
- ❑ Paid advertising on the media was identified as such, and the costs and conditions involved were reasonable and equally applied to all candidates and parties.¹⁹⁸
- ❑ Limits on advertising spending (as political speech) were instituted only in the interest of promoting equality between candidates or parties.¹⁹⁹
- ❑ A pluralistic media promoted citizen access to information, and the media was free to play an impartial and objective role in covering electoral issues.²⁰⁰

5.02: Public media neutrality

Model Commitment: Laws and regulations concerning state-owned or state-controlled media of all types shall be required to: not favor or disfavor any party or candidate standing for election or any side supporting or opposing matters in a referendum; provide equitable and accurate coverage in news and other activities for electoral contestants and referendum proponents and opponents; provide equitable access for such contestants to provide their messages to voters; and, should political advertisements be permitted, ensure equitable availability for them to provide such ads.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- Editorial independence was protected, and the government did not abuse resources or influence to exert control over media content.²⁰¹
- News coverage of incumbents in the public media was not abused so that it constituted additional free airtime or print coverage.²⁰²

- Paid content in media and other information sources, including online, was clearly marked and distinguishable from editorial and user-generated content.²⁰³
- Paid advertising on public media was identified as such, and the costs and conditions involved were reasonable and equally applied to all candidates and parties.²⁰⁴

5.03: Public media voter education efforts

Model Commitment: Laws and regulations concerning state-owned or state-controlled media shall be required to provide accurate and timely information to the public on how to register to vote, how to verify the accuracy of such registration, and where, when, and how to cast votes. This information should be easily understood by voters (e.g. using plain language), and available in minority languages and in formats as needed by voters, including those for persons with disabilities.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- The state proactively put in the public domain government information of public interest.²⁰⁵
- Voter education campaigns included information about the voting and registration process.²⁰⁶
- The media took steps to reach all segments of society, including those who speak minority languages or live in rural areas.²⁰⁷

5.04: Public media fair poll reporting

Model Commitment: Laws and regulations concerning state-owned or state-controlled media of all types shall be required to provide the source of public opinion poll results, the time it was compiled, any margins of error, and who sponsored the effort when they provide such information concerning electoral contestants or referendum questions or when they provide information such as exit-polls concerning the status or projected outcomes of vote counts.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- The structure of media ownership was transparent so that citizens could better understand potential biases in their information sources.²¹⁰

5.05: Public media to report EMB electoral information

Model Commitment: Laws and regulations shall require state-owned or state-controlled media of all types to communicate material provided by the country's EMB concerning its voter education efforts, proactive public communications about electoral processes, rapid response communications concerning problems that may develop in processes, and debunking disinformation and misinformation.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- The right of access to information was respected throughout the electoral process, including its relation to the media.²¹¹
- The media aired debates between candidates and provided voter education.²¹²

5.06: Social media disinformation, hate speech monitoring

Model Commitment: The country's EMB or other specifically designated agency, cooperating with the EMB, as well as civil society's social media monitors, shall develop timely, effective capacities to monitor social media to identify election related disinformation and misinformation, hate speech, harassment, and speech encouraging or endorsing violence, in order to rapidly respond to such communications and inform social media companies so they may take appropriate actions.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- The state took the steps necessary to guarantee rights with regard to the media; for example, through the establishment of an independent body to regulate election broadcasts.²¹³
- Advocacy of national, racial, or religious hatred that constituted incitement to discrimination, hostility, or violence was prohibited by law, and the law was enforced.²¹⁴
- The regulation of the media promoted equality and absence of discrimination.²¹⁵
- The appointment and functioning of regulatory authorities of the media were transparent, and they were independent and protected from political interference. The media regulatory body acted in a transparent and impartial manner.²¹⁶

²¹⁶ AU, Principles on Freedom of Expression, art. 7

Model Commitment: A designated office within the country’s EMB or other appropriate body shall be established to engage with online media companies to identify sources of election related disinformation and misinformation, hate speech, harassment, and speech encouraging or endorsing violence and to encourage such companies to take appropriate deterrent actions.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- Advocacy of national, racial, or religious hatred that constituted incitement to discrimination, hostility, or violence was prohibited by law, and the law was enforced.²¹⁷
- Internet intermediaries were transparent and provided easy access to their policies and practice on online content management, distribution, and automated processing.²¹⁸
- Internet freedom and the exercise of human rights online were protected. Restrictions imposed were based in law, proportionate, and necessary in a democratic society.²¹⁹

5.08: Online government neutrality

Model Commitment: Rules and regulations, with defined significant penalties, shall be promulgated prohibiting any official governmental website or social media account to post messages or other information that provides an advantage or disadvantage to any electoral contestant or proponent or opponent of any referendum measure.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- The law was clear regarding the extent to which public employees could be involved in a campaign. Public employees were not coerced into voting for a particular candidate or party.²²⁰

5.09: Citizen’s data privacy

Model Commitment: Rules and regulations shall be timely promulgated to protect citizen’s data privacy in accordance with best practice standards concerning collecting, holding, transferring or otherwise using personal information for: microtargeting of political advertising; election related misinformation or disinformation and hate speech and speech that encourages or endorses violence in the electoral context; or for any form of retribution for any legal election related activities.

Relevant Norms, Standards, and Obligations

- Personal data controllers complied with data minimization, accuracy, confidentiality, integrity, and storage limitation obligations.²²²
- Personal data controllers provided clear and accessible information about their data collection and processing policies and practices.²²³
- An independent, duly-resourced body oversaw compliance with data protection principles.²²⁴
- Citizens that offered proof of identity had the right to rectify information about them that was inaccurate.²²⁵

International Engagement

Goal: To combat foreign interference aiming to subvert electoral integrity and national sovereignty through disinformation, illicit flows of funds, and other means that undermine public confidence in elections and democracy, and to share experience and practice to protect democratic norms and practice for genuine elections.

6: OVERARCHING COMMITMENT: International cooperation to advance democratic norms and credible elections

Model Commitment: Relevant government agencies, including EMBs, should engage in international and regional efforts to defend and advance democratic norms and credible elections. Such efforts include, e.g., the Summit for Democracy, Open Government Partnership, Global Network for Securing Electoral Integrity, Asian Electoral Stakeholders Forum, international associations of EMBs, regional and global dialogues of EMBs, associations of civil society and international organizations concerned with election observation, electoral credibility and democratic norms. Such engagements should enable learning and sharing of experiences, including to address issues and challenges related to cybersecurity of election infrastructure, foreign-based threats to information integrity, illicit flows of money across borders (including digital currencies), and other threats that undermine the conduct of credible elections or subvert public confidence in democracy or electoral credibility.

Norms, Standards, Obligations:

While the model commitments outlined in sections 1-5 above have been grounded to normative sources (norms, standards, and obligations) linked to the electoral cycle broadly conceived, the final commitment focuses on international cooperation. As such, the relevant normative sources, listed below, are from documents related to global assistance networks, political declarations and international cooperation agreements, which include specific articles or
